General instructions

How to use the UM Career Compass?

UM strives for an environment which emphasises personal and professional development for all of our employees, thereby fostering sustainable employability. This focus on development should be continuous throughout one's career, and not simply when a promotion (vertical development) is at stake.

The UM Career Compass was created to facilitate the dialogue on employee development and UM's support for it. The UM Career Compass facilitates dialogue between UM and employee about the employee's work, behaviour and performance. The dialogue about your development is about finding a good balance between personal talents and ambitions and organisational needs and strategies. You, the employee, provide evidence demonstrating the quality of your work and your plans and vision for the future. Employees may use all types of quality indicators, as long as they relate to a single output item and are transparent enough to be interpreted meaningfully. If (quantitative) indicators are used, the UM Career Compass serves to tell the story behind the indicators. In general, the use of qualitative and quantitative indicators should be balanced in an equal manner across all domains. The UM Career Compass should contribute to a working environment which is inclusive and in which staff are treated in an equitable and fair way.

In order to limit the workload for both academics and the leadership, we've created a rubric for this process. Please be concise, and only list content that is meaningful at present.

This UM Career Compass is applicable to all Research Fellows and Postdocs and – depending on the agreement the candidate makes with the leadership – replaces previous formats for annual talks and exhaustive promotion files.

UM Career Compass Looking back

UM employees' achievements should be seen in light of the opportunities available. In this optional section you may describe special circumstances (both personal and professional) you have encountered while achieving your results. Think of ongoing limitations, opportunities or delays. As an overall guideline – short delays of two months or less do not need to be mentioned.

My strengths and development

Reflect on last year's development talk.
Additionally, use this section to describe your strengths and points for development.

UM Career Compass Reflections on UM Core Values - A

Provide (on the next page) an overall and general reflection on how you have performed on the four UM core values (academic citizenship, personal/professional leadership, team performance and Open Science & impact) referring to the evidence you have provided in the following sections. Questions you might ask yourself include:

“Did my work demonstrate the support of academic life and the wider civic mission of the university?”

“What were the most important insights I gained into my own function and how did I act upon those insights by steering/directing my work in the past year?”

“How have I contributed to the goals and ambitions of my department?”

“How did I ensure that my research publications and data are as open as possible and as closed as necessary?”

“In which other activities in the realm of Open Science have I been involved (if any)?”

Reflect on your personal drive and personal values in relation to those four UM core values. You can support your argument by using indicators<sup>2</sup>. Note that within the various development components in the following sections, a more in-depth reflection on the application of the UM core values can be provided.

UM Career Compass Reflections on Development Components - B

When reflecting on development components – the B part of your academic profile – focus on quality and impact instead of quantity or publication arenas. You can support your argument by using indicators<sup>3</sup>. Only reflect on the development components applicable to your profile. If neither your performance nor your reflection on it has changed compared to the previous year, there is no need to answer the question(s).

Conducting research

Reflections on Development Components - B

What are your main contributions to conducting research? How have you deployed the UM core values in this domain? Select the accomplishments that are most important to discuss.

Reflect on where you are and what you have learned regarding conducting research. Explain why the above achievements matter.

Future outlook: If you plan to grow in this area, how do you plan to do so? What are your future aspirations regarding conducting research? How do they fit the needs of the department/organisation? How can the organisation support your needs? Be as concrete as possible.

Disseminating research

Reflections on Development Components - B

What are your main contributions to disseminating research? How have you deployed the UM core values in this domain? Select the accomplishments that are most important to discuss.

Reflect on where you are and what you have learned regarding disseminating research. Explain why these achievements matter.

Future outlook: If you plan to grow in this area, how do you plan to do so? What are your future aspirations regarding disseminating research? How do they fit the needs of the department/organisation? How can the organisation support your needs? Be as concrete as possible.
